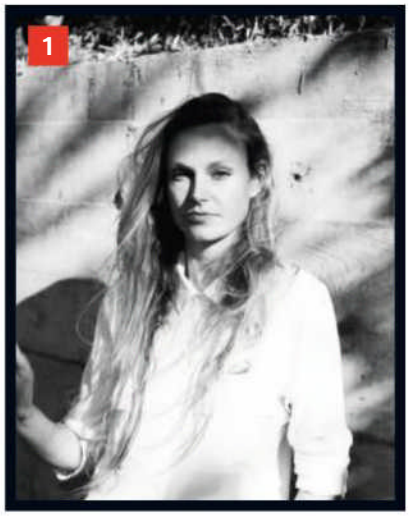
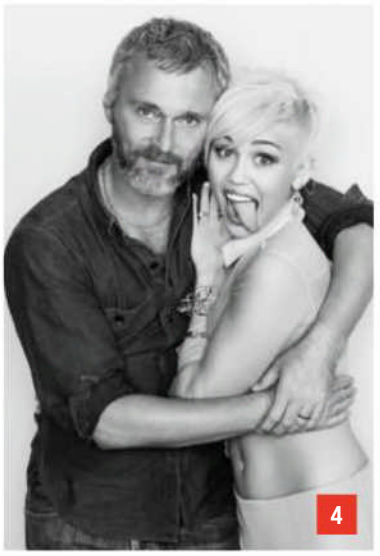
COSMO contributors





1. Hilary Walsh

L.A.-based photographer Walsh snapped actress Evan Rachel Wood at the Wright Ranch in the hills of Malibu for the fashion feature "Black Beauty" (p. 200). "Evan had just returned from her honeymoon—she was happy to be home relaxing with her husband," says Walsh, who loved the serene setting. Best advice: "Don't change your style with the trends. Let the trends come back to you."

2. Josh Aiello

"Every guy I talked to had an instantaneous negative reaction to when a girl said, 'I look fat,'" says Manhattan-based writer Aiello, who penned our inaugural "His POV" column (p. 174). Aiello is the author of A Field Guide to the Urban Hipster. Not-so-secret obsession: "People's relationships. I could talk about them all day long—with occasional breaks to talk about baseball."

3. Rachel Zoe

Superstylist Zoe conjures the pastel-punk look in this month's cover shoot with Miley Cyrus. "Miley had so much energy, and she rocked every look," says Zoe. "I didn't know she was so fashion-obsessed." Zoe's ever-evolving career includes her reality-TV series, The Rachel Zoe Project, and most recently, her own ready-to-wear collection. Spring style picks: "Novelty colored leather—jackets, pants, and shorts."

4. Matthias Vriens-McGrath

"She has a big, loud mouth and is far from shy," says Dutch-born photographer Vriens-McGrath, who captured Miley Cyrus's rebellious charisma in this issue's chic cover shoot—his first for Cosmo. No stranger to high fashion, Vriens-McGrath has held top creative positions at Giorgio Armani and Gucci and has shot countless campaigns for the likes of Celine and Yves Saint Laurent. Favorite shoot moment: "When we shot our portrait together, we were laughing so much!"

5. Courtney Rubin

"Cults spring up around health fads because we want to think we've found the answer," says writer Rubin, who explores the unregulated world of liquid diets in "The Truth About Juice" (p. 194). Rubin is a regular contributor to the Style section of The New York Times. Health mantra: "It doesn't matter how miraculous the exercise or the food is. If I don't like it, I don't do it (or eat it)."

Behind the Scenes

Never afraid of bold moves, cover girl Miley Cyrus showed up on-set with new hair and a hell-yeah attitude.

Rolling into the L.A. studio at noon sporting a sweatshirt that read Rap Music, Miley jammed to hip-hop and played with stylist Rachel Zoe's son, Skyler, between takes. Here's a peek at the rest of her day.

y Cyrus UNLEASHED

In the two years after her mega-hit show ended, Miley Cyrus has gotten engaged, shaved her head, made a couple of movies and is about to drop a hugely anticipated album. Now, this uncensored star answers to nobody but herself.

By Kyle Buchanan

The room I'm in with Miley Cyrus, just off the entryway of her mansion in Toluca Lake, Los Angeles, used to house her dad's guitars. Recently refurbished, now it's one hundred percent Miley: a room stocked with mementos that show who this former child star used to be and who she is now, at age 20.

The room can barely contain the energetic star, who tries to settle in a chair, then bounds up to perch on its armrest, and at other times, leans in to show off the contents of her iPhone, filled with pictures of Liam, her dogs, and screenshots from the TV movie Liz and Dick. She's dressed casually in a plaid button-down, but her hair is white blonde and shaved on the sides, the kind of look that can be rocked only by a woman who's truly confident in herself. Whatever else she is, that's Miley.

COSMO: If I asked you to rank the parts of your life that you feel most satisfied with—love, family, music, acting—what would be at the top?
MILEY: Number one is my relationship with Liam. That's what I feel the most confident in because you never know; there's so much hype behind my new record, but it could come out and, worst-case scenario, everyone fucking hates it.
COSMO: But you seem proud of it.
MILEY: Definitely, it's the second thing that I'm most content with. I've never gotten to make a record like this because Disney's always been on my back saying, "You've got to promote the TV show in two months, so make sure your record's done...and when you promote your record, can you promote the show, the movie, and the Hannah Montana record?" I was basically carrying two people's careers and trying to make mine the priority. Now, it's almost like being a new artist and trying to make a first impression. I think the best thing I could have done was take those two years off to really live, because now people don't think of me as who I was on the TV show.
COSMO: Do you think they ever really did? When pictures from your personal life would leak, they presented a very different image than Hannah Montana.
MILEY: Some of the worst things that have happened in my career, like things getting leaked, have actually been what's best for me, because people knew when I was on that show that I was really growing up. I never faked anything. I never played the Disney game of smiling and being a princess and then suddenly having a hard time, saying, "That isn't who I really am."

COSMO: You collaborate with many unexpected names on this record. Safe to say you have a new sound?

MILEY: I wrote this song with Mary J. Blige, and Tyler the Creator heard it and said, "I am obsessed with this song, and I will guest on it if you promise me that you will keep it on the album." And he killed it! I really didn't want to make a hip-hop record, and I'm not trying at all to be a Rihanna or a Nicki [Minaj]....That's not my vibe. When I was growing up, my older brother would sneak me Nelly CDs, my dad had me listening to Dolly [Parton] and Johnny [Cash], and my mom is a complete metal-head. So this record is a weird mixture of all that.

COSMO: Unlike a lot of musicians, you celebrate your competition.

MILEY: Katy Perry's been my friend for fucking five years, and I'm not ever gonna let our work get between that relationship. If Katy sticks with being Katy, and Ke$ha is Ke$ha, and Rihanna is Rihanna, and I'm me, there's room for everybody. The problem is when people look at Gaga and say, "Oh, that works; I'm going to be like that."

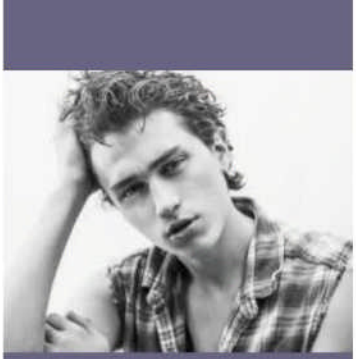
COSMO: What are you listening to?

MILEY: Frank Ocean's record is so good. And I like that he came out and admitted he was gay, because that still affects people's careers. If you don't think it does, it fucking does, and he did not care. I think it's going to make him even bigger.

COSMO: Really?

MILEY: Yeah! Now he's going to have much more loyal fans. If you want to know who's gonna buy your record for the rest of your life, get Brazilians and gays on your side.

COSMO: Why Brazilians?



Miley on...Her Brother Braison

"He is so gorgeous, it makes me wanna cry. It's like he woke up one day and he looked like James Dean, and I was like 'Dude, you have to start modeling.'"

MILEY: I don't know! My dad told me that when I was little. And my last tour there, there were 20,000 people in one night. It was insane!

COSMO: Tell me about your newest film, So Undercover.

MILEY: I did this right after I ended Hannah, so that was a completely different person from the person who is sitting here now. I don't want people to now see that film and then listen to my record and go, "Well, who is she? Who is she trying to be?" The timing kind of sucks, because I want it to be about the album.

COSMO: Does it put a dent in your enthusiasm to act?

MILEY: I'm definitely putting acting on the back burner, although I loved doing Two and a Half Men. You work on a movie for three months and you either become emotionally attached to it or hate it... and then it's torture having to tell people to watch it, because you could barely watch it. In music, you have the control. But with acting, sometimes you get put in a bad situation.

COSMO: Let's talk about Liam. Do you ever have these moments when you're still struck by how hot he is?

MILEY: Yeah, all the time! I'll literally look at him and be like "You are hot, dear god!" The other day, I turned on the pool heater and it was steaming, and he walked outside and took off his clothes and jumped in the pool. I was like, "I'm gonna faint—the hottest guy of my life is in a steaming pool. This looks like a Playgirl shoot." So I took a photo and made it the background on my phone. My best friend grabbed my phone and was like, "Who's that? He is so hot!" That's my hubby!

COSMO: Now thanks to The Hunger Games, a million girls love him.

MILEY: Honestly, he is so much hotter in real life. In movies, they make him shave and look young. In The Hunger Games, they darkened his hair and it doesn't look like him.

COSMO: But isn't it kind of fun that you get different versions of him?

MILEY: Role-play! Role-play! But I don't like the Hunger Games look. I don't like him with no facial hair.

COSMO: Your romantic history includes Liam, Nick Jonas, Justin Gaston....You've done pretty well.

MILEY: I know, right? I'm happy I don't have to date anymore though. All my friends are guys, so I hear the shit guys say about dating. One guy called me and said, "Miley, I don't know what to do—this girl won't leave my house. It's 6:00, and I've got a blind date at 6:30." And I was like, "I'm so happy I'm married, because you guys are cruel!" It's hard to find a good guy, and all girls know that guys don't think with their brains.

COSMO: Is everything cool with your dad? You called him out when he said you'd have three weddings.

MILEY: I didn't know what he was talking about! I had to put him on blast, and then he called me saying "You made me look dumb." Like, Dad, you made me look dumb: I didn't know about my own wedding?

COSMO: So what will it be like?

MILEY: I feel the bigger the wedding, the more it becomes a target for people to ruin. So we just want it to be small, with the people who we'd take bullets for. I don't want to be looking at those photos and see people that I wish hadn't been there. C'mon, I can't even get coffee without a million paparazzi following me, so I don't know why anyone thinks I'm going to have this huge, extravagant wedding. That is so not who I am. ■

Miley on...Her Bold Haircut

"Pixie cuts like Anne Hathaway's are so cute, but I wanted not to be cutesy in any way. Guys are told to believe that only long hair is sexy, but I'm lucky Liam likes it and doesn't care."
